BASEBALL SCHEDULES GOOD FOR CUBS AND WHITE SOX

By Mark Shields

Opening April 11 on the North Side with the Pittsburgh Pirates, the Cubs play eight games, then hike around the western end of the National league circuit. Another short visit at home and Mitchell and his hopefuls go to the seaboard to take on the eastern clubs.

Brooklyn, the first eastern club to come west, arrives June 1. The Cubs have the advantage at the end of the campaign, winding up on the North Side with Boston.

Twelve Saturday and 14 Sundays will be spent at home, and July 4 is also slated for the North Side.

Schedule makers of the American league have framed an itinerary that should be helpful to the White Sox the start of the season and may the club jump enough to overcome the long bit of roadwork at the tag end of play. Opening in St. Louis April 11, the Sox play eight games and then come home to entertain the Browns. Of the first 48 games on the Sox card, 32 are on the South Side lot.

Seventeen games will be played there against the eastern teams in May, New York heading the march westward May 10. Only seven games are left for the South Side park after the month of August. The last game on the South Side will be Sept. 16 against the Browns. The closing game of the season is Oct. 1 in New York against the Yankees.

Fourteen Sunday and 13 Saturday bills will be put on at the South Side. Decoration day and Labor day are the home holidays drawn by the Hose. Conflicting dates with the Cubs are June 24 and Sept. 9 and 16.
